An Unexpected Appearance in Thoracic Computed Tomography

Enver Özçete, Ferhat Çağiran, Hasan Mansur Durgun, Ayhan Özhasenekler
Department of Emergency Medicine, Faculty of Medicine, Dicle University, Diyarbakır, Turkey

A 77-year-old woman presented at our emergency department with a meat particle stuck in her throat. She was conscious, fully cooperative, and had normal vital signs and physical examination. As no foreign material was observed in the postero-anterior chest X-Ray, a thoracic computed tomography (CT) with intravenous (IV) contrast was obtained and given below. What is your diagnosis?

Figure 1. Axial thoracic CT cross sections

Figure 2. Coronal thoracic CT cross section